Established in 1979 in Melbourne, Copperart as it was originally known, opened its first store and soon grew into a National chain of over 140 retail outlets selling a unique range of mostly copper and brass products. Through its heavy use of television advertising, Copperart fast became a household name. By the year 2000 the product range in the Copperart stores had changed dramatically and bore little resemblance to original concept and the once famous copper and brass had virtually disappeared. In its place was an exciting new range of contemporary, everyday, household items that made up an inventory of everything from cookware to manchester, outdoor leisure and fitness products, as well as toys, electrical, furniture and much more.
