DiscVision GmbH, Paderborn, Germany and a number of partners of the project UHCI (Universal Home Control Interface) are presenting the first results of a long term initiative for the development of technologies that aim to develop universal home control user interfaces. The vision of this R&D project is to develop technologies which allow to setup interactive user interfaces that have a common look & feel for different types of end devices. Thus, if the user is able to control a certain application on one platform or a certain service it should be very easy to control such a service also on another platform or even control other services.
