Thanks to advances in science and technology, as well as persistent health-care advocates lobbying for more eco-friendly pest control, the adverse effects of pesticides have been lessened to some degree for residents of Dubai, Abu Dhabi and the world at large. While it is easy to assume that farmers and pesticide manufacturers are apathetic and value money more than human safety, this is an unfair and inaccurate assumption. Pesticides are necessary in order to ensure the survival of crops and to prevent the spread of various diseases. The problem with pesticides is that not all of them do these things without negatively affecting lives and the environment. Studies have shown that some pesticides actually do more harm than good in the long run.
