As a medical student at Gajra Raja Media College Gwalior he enjoyed popularity among students and teachers alike owing to his almost professional approach to cultural activities of the college. As a cultural secretary of the college during 1972-74 he enjoyed picking up first prizes on several of Art disciplines like Fine arts, Oil paintings, Sculpturing, Instrumental music solo and Rangoli paintings (local folk art of India) Continuing in this very Institute he completed his masters training and degree (Master of Surgery, M.S.) in 1974 under one of the most renowned neurosurgeon Prof. R.S Dharker as the head of the department of surgery. The Little did he know of Plastic surgery then but his keen inclination to fine arts and sculpturing has created a foundation for the making of a future Plastic Surgeon. His dynamism toward taking art to surgery took him to the father of Plastic surgery Prof. C. Balakrishnan at PGIMER, Chandigarh, in India. At Postgraduate Institute of Medical Education and Research in Chandigarh he was churned and trained ceaselessly for 2 years by top two Indian Plastic surgeons namely Prof CBK and Prof. C. P. Sahwney during 1975-77. The fire to ascend and serve the masses better took this young and well-trained plastic surgeon to England in 1978 where he was exposed to microsurgical methods of reconstruction by Prof. D. A. McGrowther at Shotely Bridge Hospital, Consett, CO. Durham in England. The association lasted full four years with Dr. Ashok and ended abruptly when he has to leave shotely bridge to take the first chair in Britain in London. However the memories of those golden days cherished for the life time on both sides and the experience was greatly used when he returned back home in 1983 to join as Assistant at the parent institute PGI Chandigarh. It was here due to the inability to practice microsurgery the birth of the method described in the book took place. He ascended fast into an associate and then into an additional in 1986. In 1993 professor Ashok moved to Middle east and with him moved his technique of reconstruction that he continued to practice today and recommends strongly when other methods of reconstruction cannot be used.
